

EHDD Internship Program

EHDD is a national leader in architecture, design, and sustainability with expertise in libraries and educational facilities, buildings for science, and housing, as well as museums, aquariums, and zoos. In our rich, 75-year history, we have developed an award-winning practice that integrates planning, technology, and the user experience. We work not from preconceived ideas, but from a belief in the primacy of the user and intensive collaboration with clients and consultants. We are good listeners who foster a working environment of mutual respect and amiability.

We are looking for students that are enthusiastic, dedicated, and passionate about design, architecture, and sustainability to participate in the EHDD Internship Program. EHDD offers paid, full-time in both the San Francisco and Seattle offices. In-person attendance will be required for the duration of the internship pending no changes to COVID-related protocols, in which case we would switch to hybrid or fully remote work. Interns should be in year 3 or higher in undergraduate architecture programs, or have completed 1 year of a graduate program. Recently graduated students will not be considered for an internship, but we are hiring for permanent positions, so please refer to the firm's website for full-time postings.

EHDD takes pride in its people and considers itself a teaching office. We are committed to giving interns a meaningful variety of experiences that provide exposure to the many different aspects of the profession. Interns work as an active member of a project team and are encouraged to attend meetings and site visits. They will participate in the iterative process as we synthesize site context, sustainability, program, stakeholder feedback, and other criteria into a timeless design. During the course of the internship, interns are also asked to give a presentation to the office on a topic of interest. EHDD has many fantastic resources, both in its library and its network.

EHDD is committed to equal opportunity employment and women, minorities, individuals with disabilities, and protected veterans are encouraged to apply.
